

Clear 22°
5 Day Forecast

NEPA NEWS
NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA'S LARGEST NEWS TEAM

NEWS SEARCH

Advanced search

News | Classifieds | Directory | Marketplace | My Zwire!

Thursday 26 February, 2004 Home > News > NEPA News > State News

NEPA News

State News

Scranton

Citizens' Voice

Daily Review

Suburban Weekly

Tri-boro Banner

Valley Advantage

Pottsville

Shamokin

Tunkhannock

NEPA Business

Electric City

NEPA Resources

Weather

Sports

Business

Classifieds

Business

Directory

About NEPANews

Classifieds Center

- Place an ad NEW
- Search ads

nepajobfinder.com

- Find a job
- Post a resume

NEPACARFINDER.COM

- Car Ads
- Local dealers

nepapers
FREE to join!
click here now

State News

Shippensburg agrees to drop speech code rules

The Associated Press

February 25, 2004

Shippensburg University said it will reword its student code of conduct to change a provision that critics said restricted free speech, a rule that was cited when students were ordered to take down posters denouncing Osama bin Laden.

U.S. District Judge John E. Jones III in September granted a preliminary injunction barring enforcement of provisions of the code that prohibited "acts of intolerance" including racist, sexist and homophobic speech.

Jones said the provisions "could certainly be used to truncate debate and free expression by students."

Shippensburg, a campus of 6,500 undergraduates 40 miles southwest of Harrisburg, said it would change the wording of the code so that it "clarifies but does not change the university's expectations for student behavior."

The Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, the group that had sued Shippensburg over the code, said Tuesday that the school's decision was a "historic victory."

"Despite originally dismissing the lawsuit as 'frivolous and without merit,' Shippensburg has now been forced to recognize that its broad restrictions on free speech violate the First Amendment," said Alan Charles Kors, the group's chairman.

A resident adviser at the university said in a deposition that students were forced to take down posters that depicted bin Laden in crosshairs because it violated the code.

The new code will say that students must comply with applicable federal and state anti-discrimination laws.

Shippensburg spokesman Pete Gigliotti said no posters were taken down "for any kind of political or free speech issues." If anything was taken down, it was because of fire safety issues, he said.

Shippensburg president Anthony Ceddia said the new policy won't change the school's commitment to "community, civility, citizenship and character."

"These changes reflect not only a great deal of discussion, debate and research both on- and off-campus to rewrite the code as directed by Judge Jones, but our continuing commitment to the idea that a university is a marketplace of ideas based on an individual's right to free speech," Ceddia said.

Jones had barred the enforcement of student code provisions banning "acts of intolerance ... for ethnic, racial, gender, sexual orientation, physical, lifestyle, religious, age and/or political characteristics," acts "that demonstrate malicious intentions" or cause "subordination, intimidating and/or harassment of a person or group."

Changes in the code were approved recently by Shippensburg's trustees, the school said.

Back to top

E-mail this story
to a friend

A Match.com advertisement banner. On the left is a small photo of a smiling blonde woman. The text reads "Find a few favorites now." followed by the Match.com logo and the tagline "Are you matching?". Below this is a search bar with the text "I am a" followed by a dropdown menu showing "M", "seeking" followed by a dropdown menu showing "F", "between" followed by a dropdown menu showing "18", "and" followed by a dropdown menu showing "35", and a "Go" button with a magnifying glass icon.

Find a few favorites now. match.com
Are you matching?
I am a seeking between and

Read our Privacy Policy

Copyright © 1995 - 2004 PowerOne Media, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

News | Classifieds | Directory | Marketplace | My Zwire!